Pony walls, like regular walls, have top and bottom plates, that is, the horizontal members that the vertical studs fasten to. The studs are installed on the same 16-or 24 inch spacing used elsewhere in the house. Pony walls with exterior surfaces, such as foundation walls, get structural sheathing such as plywood or OSB just like any other wall.

Wall Painting Techniques for Old or Damaged Walls

Should I clean old brick walls? Cleaning is justified in certain circumstances, but in many cases will do more harm than good. It risks damaging the brickwork, can remove a building's sense of history, and may bring only short-term benefits. Cleaning can be appropriate, however, when there is a need - for example, to remove inappropriate ...
