I Thou

I-Thou, theological doctrine of the full, direct, mutual relation between beings, as conceived by Martin Buber and some other 20th-century philosophers. The basic and purest form of this relation is that between man and God (the Eternal Thou), which is the model for and makes possible I-Thou relations between human beings.

I-Thou | philosophical doctrine | Britannica

The I-Thou relationship cannot be explained; it simply is. Nothing can intervene in the I-Thou relationship. I-Thou is not a means to some object or goal, but a definitive relationship involving the whole being of each subject. Like the I-Thou relation, love is a subject-to-subject relationship.

I and Thou - Wikipedia

The notion of I-Thou was developed by the twentieth-century, Jewish philosopher Martin Buber (February 8, 1878 – June 13, 1965). It appeared in his famous work of the same name I and Thou. The term refers to the primacy of the direct or immediate encounter which occurs between a human person and another being.

I and Thou - Communication Theory

The I-Thou situation cannot be sustained indefinitely and every Thou will at times become an It. Through this situation objective knowledge is acquired and finds expression. In a healthy man there is a dialectical interaction between the two situations : every I-it contains the potential of becoming I-Thou, the situation in which man's true personality emerges within the context of his world.

Buber's I and Thou (Summary) - Philosophy & Philosophers

I and Thou is written as a series of long and shorter aphorisms, divided into three sections. The aphorisms within each section are arranged without any linear progression; that is, they are not supposed to be read as subsequent steps in an argument, but as related reflections.
