Mandala of Being | Richard Moss

Just so, Moss chooses the perfect visual map for this important book about self-awareness: a mandala. A mandala is a geometric, usually circular figure in Hindu and Buddhist thought that represents the universe. In the psychoanalytic realm, this figure represents the quest for self-unity and completeness.

In Richard Moss's book, Moss describes the malady of living our lives in a state of unawareness and that by finding unity in our own mandala of being, we can emerge transformed and renewed. The mandala in this case is described as a circle, where the center point is the beginning and the end of conditioned thought, the Now, and thoughts coming into or out of the center represents conditioned thought.
