A project plan is a formal, written document that lists all key project details like milestones, deadlines, sprints or tasks, and owners, in an effort to manage, track, and control a project throughout its lifecycle. A project plan helps direct efforts and budget, but will usually experience some (if not many) changes as the project moves forward.

However, once the project is finished, it's smart to send out a final summary report. The purpose of a summary is to offer stakeholders a wrap-up to the project. You'll use it to officially close it out. Again, it's a high-level overview, but instead of including updates and statuses, you'll provide a summary of how the overall project ...

The green line is an alignment guide, which is a new feature in Word 2013. It shows you when a picture you're dragging is aligned with a margin, with the center of the page, with the top of a paragraph, or with another picture. It really doesn't have anything to do with the inability to move the picture up beyond the bottom of the header area.
